POPPER: "Now be happy, my son, and be careful of Lulu."
MOMMER: "Yes, do nothing to make her unhappy, Leander."
LEANDER: "Ha, my evil genius has left me. You both may depend on it that the efforts of my whole future life will be to make my WIFE happy."

2. LEANDER: "Come, WIFE, I'll get camp-stools and we'll sit out on the observation platform and view the scenery."
LULU: "All right, HUSBY. You go and get the camp-stools; I'll be with you just as soon as I get this box of chocolates out of my bag."

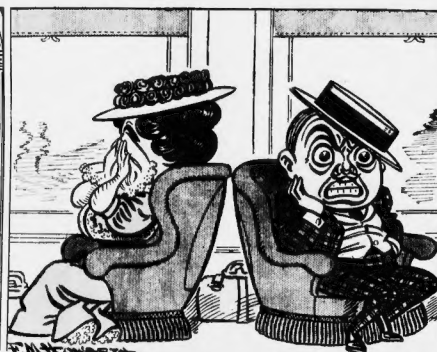

3. PASSENGER (rushing out): "Oh! oh! oh! I shall faint! I must have air! Air! Oh!"
LEANDER: "Geet! Madam, one moment. Take this seat."

4. LEANDER: "Now, pray sit there. I'll go and get you a glass of water. You'll be better in a few minutes."
LULU: "I'll be right here!"

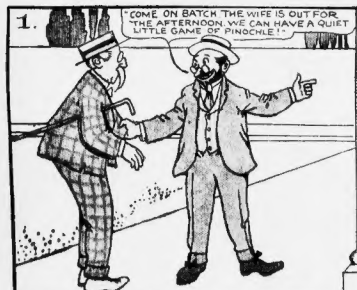

5. LEANDER: "But, Lulu, dear, sweetheart, let me explain. I—" LULU: "Don't talk to ME! I saw you with my own eyes! Oh, you Dm Juan! And on our wedding trip! I saw you with your arms clasped lovingly around her! Yes, I did! I did! I did!"

6. LULU: "Oh, who is me! To think I should be subjected to THIS! Oh, I wish I had never married him! I had warning enough, goodness knows. I'm going to leave him at the next stopping place, I am!"
LEANDER: "Ye gods! And can THIS be married life? TROUBLE! Who said TROUBLE?"

WON A HERO MEDAL LOST HIS LEG

GEORGE POELL AND THE
LITTLE BOY PAUL USSARY
HE SAVED.

LITTLE PAUL AND THE NAUGHTY ENGINE

How Fireman GEORGE POELL Saved Little 2-Year-old PAUL But Slip- ped Under The Locomotive's Wheels And Is Crippled For Life

Let the multitude—every man, woman and child—that read in this newspaper a year ago (the exact date of the issue was July 30, 1905) how Fireman George Poell snatched baby Paul USSARY from death under the wheels of his flying locomotive, very nearly at the cost of his own life, will be glad to learn that the United States Government has recognized the exceptional heroism of the act with a medal for the brave fireman, who is crippled for life.

This is the first medal to be awarded by the Government "for conspicuous bravery and self-sacrifice in the saving of life in private employments," and particularly in the land commerce of the nation, where a railway employee was the hero.

The President himself selected the design of the medal from several submitted in a competition of artists, and sent it to the mint for reproduction in gold, and has notified Mr. Poell of his action in the following letter:

My Dear Mr. Poell: You have been awarded a medal of honor.

provided under the Act of Congress approved February 23, 1905. You have, by extreme daring, endangering and almost losing your own life, saved the life of a child, at the cost of crippling yourself permanently. The enclosed statement of facts sets forth what you did. No man could have shown greater courage, greater skill and daring or more heroic indifference to his own safety. It is not in my power to make you any material amends for the crippling injuries you received when in saving the life of a helpless child you so nearly lost your own, but I trust that the medal will at least be proof to you that your countrymen realize that you have performed a deed which will serve as an inspiration to every American who hears or reads of it, and which lifts by just so much the standard of the citizenship of which we are so proud.

With warmest hopes for your welfare, believe me, sincerely yours,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The statement of facts upon which the medal was awarded is essentially that made for this newspaper by the hero himself while he lay in the hospital.

It is announced informally, but on good authority, that Harold Sterling Vanderbilt, son of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, and Miss Eleanor Sears, of Boston, are engaged.

This is the most interesting couple in all American society at the present moment for a great many reasons.

Young Mr. Vanderbilt is the richest bachelor in America and is the only eligible youth of his name still unmarried.

Miss Sears is in her way the most interesting girl in the Newport smart set or the Boston Brahmin circle, to both of which she belongs. A New York clubman once described her as "the most up-Boston girl in Boston." She is as far removed from the habit with a collar and a four-in-hand tie. She sails with a hitch of the shoulders, a long stride and "the Harvard swagger." She also a run, a hop, skip and a jump across the street.

She studies every tune that's going. Her eyes things are "heavenly," and when necessary she expresses her opinions even more strongly than that.

"I had a bully good swim," she said to her friends after leaving Harold Vanderbilt in the swim of his life from misery hand to misery beach, a mile and a quarter. "But there was a hidden of a tow," she added.

"I was out of form and did it rotten," she explained to a friend when she was beaten at tennis this season by Miss Edna Barger, of New York.

She went out sailing with Harold Vanderbilt on his 35-foot sloop, in her bathing suit this summer.

She went bicycling with him all along the shaded drives of Beverly Farms.

"I'd like to see a real man. I don't think there are any in our set. They're all sissies," she once said to a friend. People are now wondering if she has found one in Harold Vanderbilt.

Early this spring it was rumored that she was engaged to John Sutton, of Boston. But that was before Harold Vanderbilt came to Beverly Farms to visit his friend, Harold Tweed, and became her cavalier. Last year her name was linked with young Fred Prince, but there was nothing serious in that.

A dozen or more society men have paid court to her in the last few years, but she has held them all at arm's length. She fascinates them by her frankness and dash, but she is no flirt. She likes her company if they can keep up to her in sport.

She is an outdoor girl, and an all-around athlete. She is always a prominent figure in the tennis tournaments at the Newport Casino.

She plays tennis four hours at a stretch and thinks nothing of doing forty-five holes of golf in a day.

When she was out automobilizing with the George Lee party in Wat tham, a few weeks ago, and a boy was run over, she jumped out, picked up the injured child and carried him to her home in a hospital.

She is full and well built. Her arms are as muscular as an athlete's.

She can do everything on a yacht and will keep on all sail in the stiffest wind, when all the old salts are reefing.

She is not only a dead game sport outdoors. She values beauty and she is always ready to keep it up all night.

She plays bridge with perfect skill and phenomenal luck. There is no end to "the party tricks" she knows.

When she wants to see a friend who is waiting by in an automobile, she runs out into the street and jumps on the running board while the motor is in motion.

Her unconventional ways are the despair of her undertakers, who come from the exceedingly exclusive and blue-blooded Coolidge family of Boston.

When she's at home in Boston the prim Beacon street families hold their hands up in horror at her antics.

Miss Sears has a pleasant face, bronzed and reddened by constant outdoor exercise, and a slightly nervous nose. She looks full of life and fun, as she is. Many people think her handsome, but all of them, even the jolly old Bostonians who are horrified by her ways, know that she is interesting.

Miss Sears used to be a great chum of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth when the latter was still Alice Roosevelt. They did all sorts of athletic "stunts" together.

Society hears that Harold Vanderbilt found it a hard task to win this dead game sport, and that he is finding it even harder to keep her. The first condition she imposed was that he had to keep up with her in all kinds of sports and daredevil adventures. He is a rather quiet, studious and reticent youth, and these things are hard on him. The first test she made of him was to take him for the mile and a quarter swim from Muddy Island to Beverly Beach, in which he almost kept up with her. As she waited for him to come out of the water she asked:

"How do you like it, sonny?"

"I was nearly dead and not able to get up off his hands and knees," he stammered.

"It's badly, hottest time of my life," he said.

He has to get up at 5 or 6 o'clock in the morning, and ride for three or four hours every day, and then row all day, and finally dance all night. Sometimes he looks exhausted and forlorn, but he is sticking to it. He is determined to show that he can be a dead game sport, too.

The Newport men who lead lives of gluttony and luxury are looking for a fight at him, but they say that when people know one another they will find them to be the good old family virtues, and say that his present training is a glorious thing for Harold.

Young Vanderbilt is about six feet tall, and has a high forehead and an intelligent expression. He has just gone through quite and ultra feminine, while the second Harold, where he was very athletic. He is as nearly a cowboy as a gentleman was not famous as a "sport," but he was out.

MISS LOTTIE VARCHEREAU, of Boston, the most coveted girl in the world, who at twenty-two has had 2,000 offers of marriage, has recently received a novel invitation. It comes from the bachelors of the Flathead Valley, in Montana, and asks her to make them a vacation visit.

The Mayor, the postmaster and several of the wealthiest men of the town of Kalispell have signed this singular petition. They say they don't want to marry her—they only want her company—but when men say that, of course, every one knows what they mean.

Just how the Flathead bachelors propose to court pretty Miss Varchereau is still a mystery. But apparently they have laid a deep plot to capture Boston's famous beauty.

This interesting situation arises from a letter which Miss Varchereau wrote to the Census Commissioner in Washington last winter, asking him to provide husbands for the thousands of hopelessly leftover, old maid and girls in Boston.

Miss Varchereau's letter might have been buried in the Government archives, and the poor little Boston girl's plaintive plea never reached the public had it not been discovered and printed in this newspaper.

Immediately Miss Varchereau began to receive letters by the hundreds from bachelors and lovers from all over the country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, each letter containing a more or less veiled marriage proposal. Nor were these women limited to this country. One of them was an officer in the Egyptian army, who wrote from his station on the Nile.

The number of suitors soon increased to a thousand, and before the flood of matrimonial correspondence had subsided it had reached 5,000.

Four Miss Varchereau had become almost distracted at the flood caused by her latest letter and her pretty pictures. No girl in the world, so far as historical records show, ever had so many proposals before. She could have chosen a house in Europe, Africa, in California, Alaska, or any State of the Union, or even in South America, for there were lovers in all those places, wherever this newspaper circulated, begging her to come and marry them.

A Bit of the Sport the Bachelors Promise Miss Varchereau.

where you can catch trout weighing from seven to eight pounds, and climb the glorious mountains around here, and have as much sport as you can in Flathead Lake and River, on waters so long and broad that no canoe here could navigate them.

We will show you the prettiest valley that lies out of doors, and the Flathead Indian Reservation that the Government is about to give you a settlement.

We will show you herds of buffalo, cattle, and horses and all typical wild west scenes.

We will aid you to secure a chance for a homestead, when the Reservation is thrown open, and for all other Boston girls who wish to come out here to make their home in this valley.

We are well-to-do in horses, cattle, land, etc., but we are fairly starving for pretty girls.

There are five well-to-do unmarried men in the valley for each bachelor. You and your friends need not think that we just want to court you out here and marry you against your will. We want your society most of all. You can all live independently if you wish to.

You can engage in almost any kind of industry and grower, but come out and see us and find out what "Western hospitality" is.

Sincerely yours,
JAMES H. WILFONG.

Postmaster,
CHIEFEST BRINERALL,
W. B. GREEN, Mayor,
GEORGE R. STANARD,
J. F. MALONEY, D.D.S.,
Members of the Flathead Bachelors' Club.
Mr. White, the postmaster whose name is the first signed to the letter, is a young man who is going out there.

The concerted action of the Kalispell bachelors to get the much-coveted Boston beauty to visit them brings to light the interesting fact that the Flathead valley in Montana probably contains the greatest number of wealthy bachelors. In proportion to the population, to be found anywhere in the United States. There are about 15,000 people in the Flathead district, of which 6,000 live in Kalispell, the county seat.

In an ordinary community there would be about 15,000 men over twenty-one, two-thirds of them married, on the way of 15,000, and the rest women and children.

But the Flathead valley has the unheard-of number of five thousand bachelors, most of them wealthy and well-to-do. Nearly every man you see in Kalispell is a bachelor. The postmaster is a bachelor, too.

The bachelors' club of Kalispell has some wealthy citizens and gay cowboys as members. Several of them are engaged in the hotel industry of raising buffaloes. There is a herd of several hundred of these rare animals in the Flathead valley, which Miss Varchereau will see if she goes out there.

Another bachelor who was much interested in the plan to invite the pretty Boston girl in the Flathead valley is Mr. William C. Whittaker, a millionaire ranchman. He owns an automobile, in which he goes out to look after his farms and his cattle, including such things as his horse and back stock.

Another bachelor who was much interested in the plan to invite the pretty Boston girl in the Flathead valley is Mr. William C. Whittaker, a millionaire ranchman. He owns an automobile, in which he goes out to look after his farms and his cattle, including such things as his horse and back stock.

FAIRLY STARVING FOR PRETTY GIRLS' FACES.

They have tried all sorts of experiments to relieve the situation. One bachelor built a fine house and hired two Chinamen to run it. One to act as cook, the other as butler, and general housemaid. At first they worked for $10 a month. Then they advanced them to $20 a month apiece.

But when they demanded a hundred dollars a month each, they shut up his house and went to live at the Bachelor Club, downtown.

It is almost impossible to hire a "hot" housewife in the town. You don't even get cashmere or cashmere in stores. The two main bookshelves in town are backlogs.

The churches can't get enough women singers to give a mixed choir, and so have to depend upon male chorists. The churches indeed are feeble institutions for there are so few married women in the town to act as successfully.

Kalispell is in fact a "Pleasant Eden." While in this deplorable condition, some of the bachelors saw Miss Varchereau's letter and pictures in the city's favorite newspaper.

This caused no end of discussion. The contest between Boston, full to overflowing with the prettiest, most winsome, highly bred, blue-blooded and cultured girls, all "ready to serve," as Miss Varchereau said, and Kalispell utterly girlless, was heart-breaking.

Some suggested that the bachelors should send a decent "to do" in Boston and bring out a "to do" in Kalispell. But this was not so far as to name the decoration. But when these three men thought of it, but were before them, of how they would be "entertained by the Boston people, as the "Pleasant Eden" and refused to do the people generally who would fall in understanding the seriousness of their situation, they refused to act.

"How would you go about it to do a 'to do' instead of girls, anyhow?" asked one of them who was in Boston and had a glimpse of some of the difficulties that would be met with.

One Girl's Wholesale Proposal.

"I would like to see you in the better, on the subject of the Boston 'to do' and the 'to do' in Kalispell. But this was not so far as to name the decoration. But when these three men thought of it, but were before them, of how they would be 'entertained by the Boston people, as the 'Pleasant Eden' and refused to do the people generally who would fall in understanding the seriousness of their situation, they refused to act.

Several months went by without any result. Then one night at the club:

"I'll write a letter to Miss Varchereau, inviting her and some of her friends to come out here on a vacation trip."

"If some of the rest of you fellows will do it with me, so it won't look like a marriage proposal from me."

The club was agreed to. In due time, Mr. W. wrote an official letter paper for the formal invitation printed above.

Miss Varchereau hasn't made her mind up yet whether to accept or not. It is a most alluring prospect. And the bachelors hold out a vacation among glacial peaks, in the cool, exhilarating air and sunshine of the Rocky Mountains, and riding horseback over the great

But then there are the bachelors, what shall she do with them and their inevitable annoyances, even as in public places.

Miss Varchereau is a very modest girl, and not at all spoiled by the life of the city. She has received, it is said, as she goes to the Flathead valley she will take her carriage and a driver and two or three girl friends as companions. They will have no intention of making the trip and will not make a vacation willingly. But when men are so ready to do so, who can tell what she will do? A girl who has received the appeal of 2,000 suitors, surely.

prevented by such methods as drainage or filling of wet areas, removal, emptying or screening of water receptacles, spraying with kerosene, etc., all of which are of little value. Attention should be paid to cleaning, house, cesspools, and basins, sewers, watering troughs, and gutters, old tin cans, holes in trees, and other places where mosquitoes breed.

As malarial mosquitoes may be bred in cool springs, the edges of such places should be kept clean and they should be covered with small fish. The breeding and hatching of mosquitoes should be prevented by the use of small fish.

The Buffalo Call to be Given Miss Varchereau for a Pet.

The Only Kind of Girl the Flathead Bachelors See.

any man is a bachelor, nearly all of the business and professional men are bachelors, and most of the farmers and cattlemen are bachelors, some of whom have been reduced to the extremity of having Indian servants on the neighboring reservation.

The absence of women in this community is due to a peculiar way. When the Great Northern Railroad was built across the Flathead valley, on the way to the Pacific Coast, about fifteen years ago, a lot of enterprising young men flocked into the valley to take advantage of the opportunity for getting rich in the new country.

They came, settling and immediately the opening up of this new country. They have been so busy getting up the country.

half what we expected they would be. But this was a mild rain much—enough clothing for cleanliness, swing to another bright idea of Sally's. At each of our driving resorts on the south and north shores taking auto, knowing that we would stop at several of Long Island we stopped over for a whole day and night while Sally did a regular "hand-often" business sending out other excursion parties to points of interest at the regular New York rate of a dollar a head.

At three of these places there were two such excursions, with a total of 110 passengers carried. At the fourth resort there was such a demand for places that three trips were made, carrying, altogether, eighty persons. This stroke of business thus gave us a clear $100 to deduct from our total expense account.

Our chauffeur was good-natured about it, but I had his own account next summer.

Right here I might as well give a statement of our credit and debit account for the whole two weeks as our example is well worth following:

Auto and chauffeur 24 days, at $12 per day	$288.00
Lodgings and breakfast for 12 (average $16.75 per day)	$201.00
Dinner (average), per day $2.50	$175.00
Lunches (average), per day $0.25	$60.00
Total expenses	$724.00
Less earnings with auto	$100.00
Net expense	$624.00

This means, you will readily see, that our vacation—counting hundreds of miles traveled in our own conveyance—cost us for the two weeks only $2.30 each, or a trifle less than $1.53 per day each.

But it must be borne in mind that we were exceedingly lucky in finding a vehicle that would answer our purpose, whose owner had no other practical use for it. Several times the amount it cost us would not have one that is in the neighborhood as a regular thing.

For baggage we carried with us only a light half

4--How an Enthusiastic Party of Twelve Explored the Alabama River on Their Own Private Yacht Made by Themselves Out of Logs, with Tents for Shelter.

BY MRS. JANE DAVIDSON.

OUT of a day and night of real discomforts and visions of a whole vacation spoiled, gone for naught, our Alabama party of twelve planned a happy discovery which enabled us to spend the most enjoyable two weeks of our lives.

Our discovery is not copyrighted, neither is it limited in its usefulness to any particular part of the country. All you need is a river, or lake, or some reasonably quiet downy inlet, light breeze, a few pairs of strong arms and the ridiculously small capital represented by daily expenses of 25 cents per person.

This means that you can have a real cruise on your own private "yacht," and in the breeze away from mosquitoes, fishing by day, if you want to, sleep soundly at night, and taking nothing but the way of eating and drinking that the land affords.

It was where the Alabama River broadens and its heavily-wooded banks offer splendid shade that our party enthusiastically pitched its tents on July 15, because the Minnehaha counting around a wood an hour and two large tents, one of which we doctored for kitchen and sanitary purposes, the other a place of wrapping paper the steps of out on the clean! unclean!"

That is the plight of a man who is still young, who, only a few months ago, was full of the joy of life. From foreign shores he had come to this free country to earn the price of wedded happiness. He earned it; he gained it—enjoyed it for a week, or, maybe, a month, only to find stamped upon his flesh the curse of all the ages, the curse of leprosy.

The mark of this curse may not be hidden, no more than it can be eradicated. His comrades at labor saw it; his bride saw and recognized it; they and she fled from him.

From there began his wanderings. Over Yalta, the Caucasus and India was scattered from shore to shore by the mark of the curse. No man's hand was against him. All plighted him—but all fled at his approach. It was useless for the doctors to say: "Leprosy is not contagious." Where the mark of the curse is concerned, civilization, the established truths of science have no voice. Leprosy is contagious. Nobody wanted him. They threw food to him, as they would to a hungry dog. Mostly they accepted themselves with cunning devices to hush him on to some other community that was unsuspecting.

At length he finds himself "warecolled" on a tiny island, a mountainous, where he takes to telling of it all. Leprosy is a curse, he says, but it is not a curse that throws a different food to him to keep him as a pest and his dearest body together.

Hardly More Than a Boy.

Tals was not the leper," is a Syrian named as he said. Four years ago, when he was 10, he emigrated to this country by himself and for a dark-haired boy of 14, to whom he could not speak, he could not support himself.

At first he lived in the house of the State of Maine as a leper, carrying a pack of wild animals and giving foreign ornaments to his wife and children. The women of the family, as he said, two

A faithful woods is he who best knows the heart, anxious lover, and convinces that in her pretty hands lies the power to make or make blissful his future life. That is to say, this is so in nice care out of sin.

There are maiden boys and girls of which is often carried by a heart successfully thought-out assault, - they are led up to and considered. - In other words, are the hearts of the charming wild rose, whose sweetness is guarded by laugh and prickly thorns. Is the judicious method of gathering such further reference has

The ordinary dear little simple damed is ever disposed to love a real lover—that is to say, has but the common sense to show himself at his best, instead of permitting love to make a sort of human ostrich of him, rendering him ridiculous to all the world, and a source of annoyance to the lady of his love.

The one fatal enemy to a budding love affair is ridicule. Once a man allows himself or his love to appear in a funny light to maiden eyes, and he may find good-by to his hope of matrimony.

It is for this reason that the shy man is so hampered in his search for a wife, his nervousness making him betray the state of his case for a dozen times a day, in a score

A year and a half he worked there so steadily and lived so economically that he was able to send for the Syrian maid, who had a way in his thoughts. He came as fast as the first ship could bring her. They married and went to housekeeping near the mills.

For people so used to frugal living, his earnings were meager. They felt themselves priced and princely. Everything they needed, and more, they had. Not a cloud was on their horizon, which seemed to them to determine a life of serene prosperity, happy hours.

Awoke With the Fatal Sores.

One who went to his sleep died with thankfulness for his many blessings. In the morning he awakened the prey of despair, during the night some silent ones had been passing over his head, and he had run together. In his glass on rising he saw what he had seen upon other faces in his native land—a tell-tale blotch, a fevered glare, a burning eye there is nothing like this fatal mark. It is the first visible indication of blood tainted with leprosy. It is evident that other similar blotches would spread; that the flesh beneath them would decay and fall away; that he was doomed to die by inches, for there was no cure, no relief, no hope. He turned away in despair and shun him, all her young love shortly from him, all her young love

He could not bear to wait for that discovery to be made by his companions at the factory. Away somewhere where he would meet fewer and less sophisticated people he might delay the fatal moment when others would share his terrible secret.

s a Girl's Heart.

Very different will be the little maid's feelings if her whole family is closely associated with a sort of extra policeman who has been sent to the heart. All through the early days of courtship a certain mystery must enshroud the affair in order to please Miss Rosebud.

The secret of a little secret love making just shared by their two selves is the best possible method of advancing a wooing. It was dreadfully wrong of Dick to kiss her in the conservatory; but no one was there! And, of course, he had no right to hold her hand under the rug so long; but no one else in the wagonette knew anything about it. The smites and bruises of such little episodes are the thanks of a naughty Mr. Dick till that astute young man steals another kiss, and with it comes promise: "Your kisses shall be his by right."

Thus the pair tramped clear to Michigan and Indiana, then doubled back into Pennsylvania. Often Rashid was too ill to carry his pack, and afraid to show himself to possible customers. Then his bride would carry it for him, and show their way while he hid himself, pretending to her to be resting for she was yet in ignorance of his real intent.

But last he grew so fearful of showing himself to inquisitive country folk that he was obliged to wear a mask. He was mentioned him closely, and the knowledge that he could not much longer deceive himself brought about a nervous collapse when he was taken to a hospital in Clarkburg, W. Va. He was taken to a hospital, where he remained for three weeks.

The physicians there must have known what ailed him. His wife suddenly disappeared—few ties to human life are there which are not broken by the cry of "Uncle Sam's Clean!" It was natural that the hospital physicians kept their knowledge of his case secret. He was a doctor, and a doctor was not really contagious, they also knew that the scientific view would have no weight with either the citizen

When Raehle was able to be about his work he was quietly urged to move on the tramp steamer to Richmond, and then to Philadelphia. The railroad authorities made known to the authorities, who nevertheless bound him in a tract in the country near the Paoli grounds. The dread news leaked out and one day when the leper bathed in the water, a liver, some of the townsfolk saw him. The water police there was panic.

There was no more charity for the misfortunate now. They made it a matter of business—these paid him to take himself far from their sight. They brought him a railroad ticket to Cumberland and the townsfolk were not his friends. He felt so ill that he could not get off at Piedmont. There the local health officer, Dr. Z. T. Kalbaugh, examined him and diagnosed his case as tuberculosis. He stayed in a hospital for some time, but the fever in his lungs was too deep.

The coach in which he had traveled was cut off from the train and fumigated. At the time there was no hospital in that part of the country.

But the disquieting news had been telegraphed to that place and a mob was on hand to see that the leper was not permitted to leave the car there. The excitement aroused all the country round about, and as each station was reached such crowds were gathered and their demeanor was so menacing that the trainmen did not dare attempt to get rid of their passenger. When finally Brunswick length bent for some bread and meat and a pail of water. When the lever saw him return thus laden he leaped to his feet and ran forward. The crowd by the platform saw him and followed the path of the man who thus resembled a funeral pyre. As the food thrown to him and the pail of water passed within his reach on the end of a pole. He ate and drank voraciously. Then the people compelled him to crawl back into the freight car.

The railway men thought they could get rid of him at Washington and hauled him farther. But the health authorities forced him by appearing at the station and forbidding them to allow the man to leave the car.

Knowing that the New York hospitals

There was no stranger to leprosy cases, the Baltimore & Ohio Railway officials switched the freight car onto a fast train and speeded it northward. At Philadelphia health authorities were forwarded. They met the train outside the city, tacked leprosy signs on the car, occupied by leprosy, and compelled the road to shut back to Baltimore. The Baltimoreans were no less canny. They headed off the train, and it was the fate of the leper to be left alone in the car on a lonely siding in a deep cut near the Loring Station. The Baltimore health ment stay away and did not let him suffer for lack of food and drink.

In the meantime they tried to get the authority of the Government to send the man back to his own country. They wrote and telegraphed to every possible official and found none who considered such matters in their department. It was a most embarrassing situation, especially as the scattering residents in the neighborhood of the leper's retreat were growing suspicious.

The railroad company became indignant at these concerted efforts to force it into the hospital business. This feeling brought about a solution not hoped for by the embarrassed Baltimore doctors. One night the

CHAPTER XXIV

THAT lunatic had Tige and me simply fascinated. Every time we got a chance we would steal away to the asylum and visit with him. One day we came strolling along and he ran to meet us with a smile. I couldn't understand a cheerful lunatic, because people with cheerful dispositions don't go crazy. It is surly, sullen people, egotistical or selfish people who go crazy. I suppose our lunatic went dippy because he was too lazy to think. He didn't use his mind, so it just got rusty and got dents in it.

Some people get athletic minds from changing their minds so often, which is a good thing to do. It is a mighty poor kind of a man who won't change his mind when he finds the old idea was wrong. All the people in the world believed once that the world was flat. Suppose they hadn't changed their minds. Everybody in the world once believed that the stars were little holes in the sky. They believed in fairies and witches and the devil. Suppose they hadn't changed their minds.

Just think of believing that a wicked devil was waiting around to make us do wrong and then clapping us in the bad place. Oh, well, people are what they believe, for 'as a man thinketh in his heart so is he.'

Well, our lunatic was so cheerful that we asked him what was the matter. He said he was so tickled he couldn't keep from laughing.

"What's the matter?" asked Tige.

"Well," he said, "sit down here and I will tell you. We have two new inmates in this institution, and as they are perfectly harmless they are among the trustees. You know, there are more harmless dips in the bughouse than OUT of it. Well, this new fellow thinks he is Buster Brown—not the real Buster, but the imitation that is published in some of the papers. And he looks exactly like it (the imitation I mean). He has a fad for making resolutions, and his resolutions are just like himself. They are crazy. But one funny thing is that although there are only crazy people in this place, he hasn't got them fooled.

HE THOUGHT HE WAS THE IMITATION OF ME THAT APPEARS IN SOME OF THE PAPERS

They would have to be worse than dippy not to know Buster Brown. There may be successful imitations, but I never knew of any," he went on. "How can any one take any pride in his work when he is imitating something? And if he doesn't take pride in his work how can he succeed?"

"Well, you ARE crazy," said Tige.

"I was going to go to work," he went on, "but I was reading the other day how Socrates quit his job and just went to shooting off his mouth, and now look how famous he is."

"But fame is nothing," said Tige, "if you don't make some good use of it. It's like wealth or talent."

The conversation might have gone on indefinitely, but along came the imitation Buster and Tige, so we ran as fast as we could to hide.

We hid behind a corner and watched them. I couldn't laugh, it was too sad—toad to think of any one trying to be some one else.

Tige and I went home sad that night, because we had been very much disappointed in our lunatic friend. We found that his disease was not lunacy, but laziness, and laziness always makes me sad.

BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY AUGUST 26, 1906.

Citizens--Build This Wall.

THE future safety of this country lies in close union of independent, thoughtful citizens.

Hitherto scattered in opinion, divided by party, IMAGINING THEIR INTERESTS TO BE AT VARIANCE, the citizens of the country, taken separately as in dividends or in separate classes, HAVE BEEN AN EASY PREY FOR A SUDDENLY ORGANIZED FINANCIAL PIRACY THAT HAS TAKEN OVER THE COUNTRY'S GOVERNMENT.

You have seen a child on the seashore playing with pebbles, tossing them here and there.

Of the millions of pebbles on the shore ALL ARE AT THE MERCY OF THE WEAKEST CHILD, WHILE THEY ARE SEPARATE PEBBLES.

But take those little stones, UNITE THEM WITH CEMENT, and you will build up a wall that will resist the greatest giant, that will resist the power of the ocean itself.

So it is with the citizenship of this country. Powerful, endless in strength, BUT DISUNITED LIKE THE PEBBLES ON THE OCEAN'S BEACH THE CITIZENS HAVE BEEN TOSSED HITHER AND THITHER AT THE WILL OF THE TRUST POWER AS THE PLAYING CHILD TOSSES THE SMALL PEBBLES AT HIS WILL.

UNITY OF BELIEF, UNITY OF PURPOSE, UNITY OF ACTION, these are the cement that will fasten the people together, unite them and BUILD UP A BARRIER THAT WILL HOLD BACK AND SUCCESSFULLY DEFY THE POWER OF ORGANIZED MONEY, THE POWER OF CRIMINAL CORPORATIONS, EVERY FORCE THAT HAS HITHERTO PUT AT DEFIANCE THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE, THE WILL OF THE FOUNDERS OF THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT.

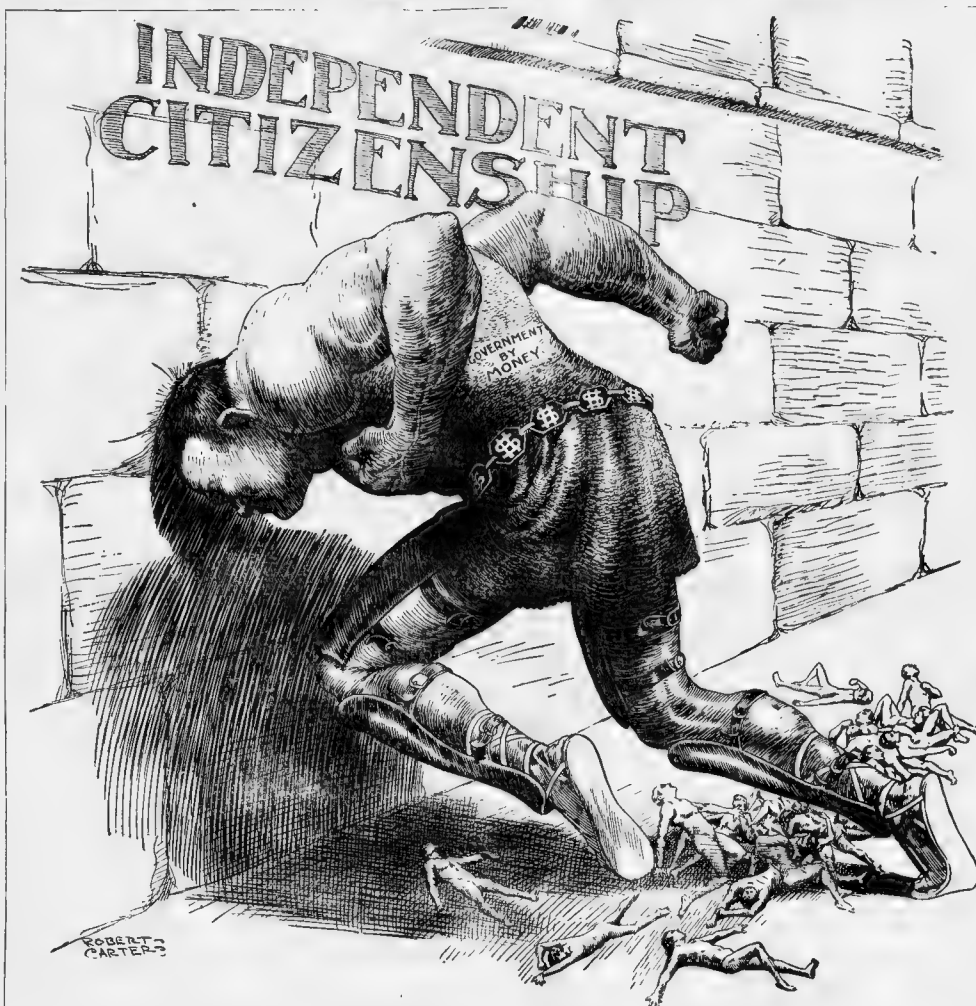

What ARE you, the individual American citizen?

You may reply:

"I am a part of this greatest nation in the world, A PART EQUAL TO ANY OF THE OTHER PARTS. I am a unit in a power unlimited and that force within represents perfectly the nation's total force. My vote is part of THE POWER THAT CONTROLS THE GREATEST ORGANIZED BODY OF HUMAN BEINGS KNOWN TO THE EARTH."

TRUE you are the equal of any man in the United States. TRUE your vote represents the one power and should be recognized in the United States. But while you and the eighty millions of others like you and the millions of VOTES like yours ARE DISORGANIZED, TOSSED IN DIFFERENT DIRECTIONS BY CUNNINGLY DEVIATED PARTY PLANS, TO SUIT THE ARRANGEMENTS OF THE ENEMIES OF THE AMERICAN SYSTEM, WHAT DO YOU AMOUNT TO?

There must be union among citizens, among voters--THE CLOSE UNION OF A STONE WALL. Citizens must stand by each other, they must all be united in the determination to make their vote A REAL VOTE. What does a man amount to if he hands his vote to one or another of his enemies? If you were among criminals and had a revolver in your pocket, you a great majority of the citizens of this precious man, bullied by what I say?

Against It the Trust Giant Will Butt His Head in Vain.

might feel safe and say, "If the United States is the SITUATION OF ALL, FOR EVEN THE WISEST AND INDEPENDENT VOTER IF AT THE INVITATION OF ONE OF IS AS HELPLESS AS THE CRIMINALS THEMSELVES, AS LONG AS HIS SLAVES, YOU HANDED FELLOWS, REFUSE TO OVERTHROW YOUR WEAPON TO UNITE WITH HIM FOR THE PROTECTION OF HIS OWN INTERESTS."

Would you be then better off than the man without a revolver? Every man in the United States has a vote, and the sum total of the votes represents the sum total of the nation's power.

Yet divided by parties, managed by trust-owned bosses, fooled by a great majority of the citizens of this precious man, bullied by what I say?

But when a thinking man, after years of struggle, after a desperate fight at odds, after a history full of bloodshed, of effort, and of self-denial, RECEIVES HIS VOTES THAT the eighty millions of AND THEN GOES UP TO HIS VOTES TO THE TRUST ENEMY TO THE TRUST MANAGER, AND SAYS: "Keep of the American people UNLESS THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES SICKENING SIGHT? Does it THEMSELVES INDEPENDENT AND PROVE THEIR POWER TO VOTE, that they die by thousands, IF THEY DIDN'T MEAN TO USE THAT VOTE WHEN THEY GOT IT?"

Any single TRUST has more of bloodshed, of effort, and of self-denial, RECEIVES HIS VOTES THAT the eighty millions of AND THEN GOES UP TO HIS VOTES TO THE TRUST ENEMY TO THE TRUST MANAGER, AND SAYS: "Keep of the American people UNLESS THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES SICKENING SIGHT? Does it THEMSELVES INDEPENDENT AND PROVE THEIR POWER TO VOTE, that they die by thousands, IF THEY DIDN'T MEAN TO USE THAT VOTE WHEN THEY GOT IT?"

Have not you, THE VOTER, been unworthy of the vote, unworthy of that kind of worthy of liberty, UNWORTHY DON'T YOU THINK OF THE SUFFERINGS AND ARE OLD ENOUGH TO THE SACRIFICE OF THEIR ABLE ENOUGH TO FATHERS?

KEEP YOUR OWN VOTE?

Do you not intend to use it for yourself, consulting with your neighbors rather than with persons paid by the trusts to influence you through corrupt journalism, corrupt bosses or otherwise?

DON'T YOU KNOW THAT EVERY DISHONEST CORPORATION AND INDIVIDUAL ON A BIG SCALE IN THE UNITED STATES HATES THE IDEA OF AN INDEPENDENT POLITICAL PARTY?

How can you hesitate about uniting with all your fellow citizens for independent political action, when you know that every single one of your national public enemies is permanently united with all the others, AGAINST POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE AT THE BALLOT?

You sympathize perhaps with the wretched people of Russia and well you may. You hope earnestly that they will win in their struggle against tyranny. You will read with delight some day that at last they have conquered in their turn, and that the millions there HAVE GOT THE BALLOT THAT THEY HAVE STRUGGLED FOR.

Suppose, however, that years from now, years after the Russians so long tortured shall have acquired that ballot, EMBLEM OF PUBLIC RULE, YOU SHOULD READ THAT THE RUSSIANS NO LONGER VOTED AS INDEPENDENT MEN?

Suppose you learn that those men who fought and died to WIN their independence had deliberately handed over their votes, all of their power to one set of grand dukes OR TO ANOTHER GRAND DUCAL PARTY. Suppose you were compelled to realize that those people in Russia after their desperate effort to get the vote DIDN'T KNOW HOW TO USE IT, DIDN'T CARE TO USE IT, TURNED IT OVER TO THEIR FORMER ENEMIES TO USE FOR THEM?

What would you say?

Wouldn't you say, "Such men are not fit to vote. Such men are not fit for freedom. Why did they make such a fuss, why did they fight, why did they suffer, why did they die by thousands, IF THEY DIDN'T MEAN TO USE THAT VOTE WHEN THEY GOT IT?"

Very well, if you would say that about the Russians, what do you suppose future history will say of YOU? Will it not be said that they were unworthy of the vote, unworthy of that kind of worthy of liberty, UNWORTHY DON'T YOU THINK OF THE SUFFERINGS AND ARE OLD ENOUGH TO THE SACRIFICE OF THEIR ABLE ENOUGH TO FATHERS?

The Schoolmen of New York

Dr. Charles J. Pickett, Vice-President, No. 1222 Tinton Avenue, The Bronx, New York, August 19, 1906.

To the Editor:

Dear Sir--Sunday, August 19, 1906, ought to be marked with a particularly bright red star. It marks the appearance of one of the best, most pertinent and valuable editorial articles I have ever read in any newspaper.

The value of such an appeal to the better parts of both teachers and parents can scarcely be estimated. I have heard more references to and more quotations from those columns in the SUNDAY AMERICAN of to-day than from any other newspaper editorial that has come to my notice. In a stroll through the parks this afternoon, again and again I heard more or less extended remarks showing the deep impression your words had made. I stood behind one of the benches in the Mall waiting for the arrival of a friend, who is in charge of the musical features. While there I listened to a reading of your gospel. The reader was an elderly German. Before he had progressed very far he had quite an interested audience, whose comments would have warmed the cockles of your heart had you heard them.

When he finished he pounded the arm of the bench with his fist as he exclaimed, "By Gott! That's what I say!" The stress you lay on the co-operation of home and school meets a responsive acquiescence from all broad-minded teachers. We of the teaching profession strive and strive to reach the parents in the way you have done, with this difference: Where we reach one you reach thousands. Parents' meetings, exhibits of school work, social gatherings, all aim toward this much-sought-for support and sympathy. No one in the throes of conflict with this mighty educational problem can realize, or even imagine the difficulties that arise from the lack of cordial support which is a requisite phase of the teacher's existence. Such articles as yours will do wonders in reforming this condition of affairs.

It has been said that Rousseau's "Emile" was the "inspired of childhood." Such chapters as you have to-day penned are most assuredly fitting sequels to any such gospel. Would that your words could have the weight they deserve! I sincerely trust that they are not the last we shall have on the same subject. At the next meeting of our association, I hope to have the pleasure of introducing a resolution of thanks to the Hearst newspapers for the expression of the thought of the teaching force of this city. I know the reception such a resolution will be given. An article in every way so admirable has never before been published in a daily newspaper.

Yours most sincerely,

CHARLES J. PICKETT.

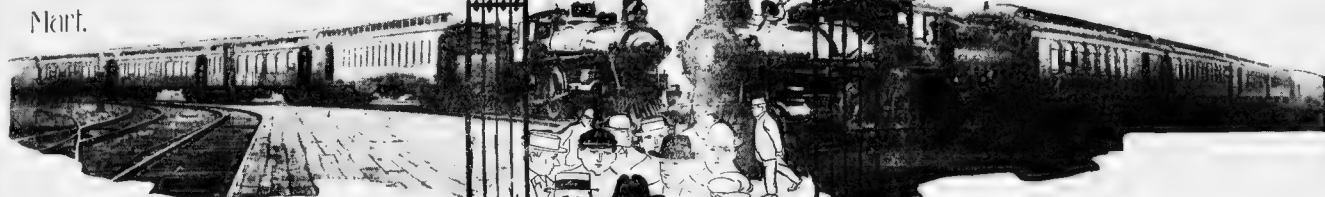

P. S.--Can you not reprint that editorial in your daily paper?

Cuban Rebels Raid Towns Nine Miles From Capital TERROR IN HAVANA

Battle Between Guerra's Army and Government Force in Pinar del Rio Expected Hourly—Communication With Santiago Province Cut Off and Uprising is Feared There.

Crisis Near in Cuban Uprising

Intervention in Cuba is being discussed by State Department officials in Washington and by President Roosevelt and advisers in Oyster Bay. Marines in Charleston and other Atlantic coast navy yards are being held in readiness for mobilization. The revolution in Cuba is believed to be due either to annexationists or agents of European governments. Government and insurgent armies are facing each other near Pinar del Rio and a great battle is expected in a few hours.

SPECIAL CABLE TO THE BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Havana, Aug. 25.—The insurgents, commanded by General Guerra, who have been raiding Pinar del Rio, are almost within sight of the Cuban capital. They raided two towns last night within nine miles of the city and, after looting the stores and terrifying the inhabitants, rode away without being attacked by the rurales, who seemed to be without information concerning their movements.

The proximity of the rebels to Havana has caused a great excitement which the efforts of the government are unable to allay. Rumors are being spread that the rebels are about to enter the city. They are an army lacking in discipline and are not to be trusted. Confidence is felt in them by the people, who are convinced that the Cuban government is tottering.

Anxious About Santiago.
Even the news that a large contingent of regular troops had sailed for New York today for the trouble has not reassured the Cuban nation.

Aside from the situation in Pinar del Rio, which is growing steadily worse, there are other sources of trouble in the country. The rebels have been successful in obtaining arms and ammunition from the United States. They are now in a position to attack the capital. The government is in a desperate straits. It is believed that the rebels are about to enter the city. They are an army lacking in discipline and are not to be trusted. Confidence is felt in them by the people, who are convinced that the Cuban government is tottering.

Rebels Won Easy Victory.
The latter are demoralized by the defeat and are in a desperate straits. They are now in a position to attack the capital. The government is in a desperate straits. It is believed that the rebels are about to enter the city. They are an army lacking in discipline and are not to be trusted. Confidence is felt in them by the people, who are convinced that the Cuban government is tottering.

In nearly every encounter with the rurales since the rebels have been in the field, they have won easy victories. They are now in a position to attack the capital. The government is in a desperate straits. It is believed that the rebels are about to enter the city. They are an army lacking in discipline and are not to be trusted. Confidence is felt in them by the people, who are convinced that the Cuban government is tottering.

A civilian who was killed in the line of duty at Pinar del Rio, was reported from there to Havana today and declared that Estrampes's men were completely routed. At the first charge of the rebels they broke and ran. It was a rout rare from start to finish, and some of the volunteers had not been seen since. This probably was the first time that a large number of rebels had been killed.

Word comes from the coast, today, that the rebel forces are concentrating in the vicinity of San Juan de Martinez and that they are even greater force than was at first believed by the government. They are well mounted, fully armed and seem to have ample supplies of ammunition and food. Supplies are constantly reaching them from the coast, where they have been landed from steamers sent from the United States. Their commissariat seems to be well organized and in good working order.

Raid in Santa Clara Province.
In Santa Clara province, a band of revolutionaries is raiding the northern section in all directions and is looting towns and villages. The small towns and plantations scattered along the coast. The same course of action is being followed in the interior. The rebels are reported from time to time, evidently moving to some common point of concentration.

The government posted a bulletin at the Pinar del Rio telling briefly of the situation in the province. It stated that the rebels were killed and one wounded. It also stated that the rebels were in a position to attack the capital. The government is in a desperate straits. It is believed that the rebels are about to enter the city. They are an army lacking in discipline and are not to be trusted. Confidence is felt in them by the people, who are convinced that the Cuban government is tottering.

AWFUL SPECTACLE OF DEATH AND SUFFERING

Many of Most Prominent in Social Life of St. Petersburg Victims.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 25.—A bomb which was exploded this afternoon by revolutionists in the great reception rooms of the villa occupied by Mr. Stolypin, the Russian premier, killed more than twenty and wounded eighty persons and threw the Czar's capital into a state of panic.

Premier Stolypin was not injured, but his son was killed and his daughter had both feet blown off. She died later. The loss was thirty years old. Among the persons who were killed was General S. M. Sazonov, minister of foreign affairs, and Count S. S. Sazonov, former Governor of Pomerania and Chief of Police. A number of persons prominent in the political and social life of St. Petersburg were also among the victims. Three of the men implicated in the plot are believed to be dead, having been killed at the time of the explosion while two of their numbers escaped.

Conspirators Not Known.
The identity of the conspirators has not been ascertained to this date. It is believed that the explosion was the work of a small group of revolutionaries.

At the time of the explosion the reception rooms were crowded. The villa is situated on the banks of the Neva River and it is believed that the explosion was the work of a small group of revolutionaries. Unbiased Reports From Counties They Say Show That, Were Convention Held To-day, "Man Who Dares" Would Be Named For Governor by Overwhelming Vote.

NEARLY ALL THE CITIES ARE FOR HIM, AND COUNTRY TOO, SUPPORTERS SAY

A careful canvass of the cities and towns of Massachusetts by friends of John B. Moran, indicates that if the Democratic convention were held this week he would be nominated by a large majority in spite of any opposition.

The figures in the following table are not given out from the Moran headquarters, but they are known to be the basis of his and his friends' claim that he has the nomination safely in hand.

CITIES	MORAN	OTHERS	TOTAL
Boston	100	10	110

"Can Defeat Governor Guid," is the other line, nothing but pure politics, is a waste in the way of making it any more strength before the voters. Many hearts are no doubt heavy, but a great demonstration that Governor Guid is beaten in 1912 by Mr. Plunkitt, who Roosevelt carried the day by 22,000 is unquestionably the strongest Democrat in the State. I am sure you will agree with me that he can defeat Governor Guid, and that he would in a probability also hold the State in 1912. I believe that you are right in your opinion that the people are ready to vote against him and in the national is a great party to have William B. Hughes Governor of Massachusetts in the presidential party next year. Are you ready to take the proposal?

"Having the fullest confidence in the excellence of Peruna as a tonic and as a remedy for catarrhal troubles, as I can testify by my family's successful use of it, I have no hesitation in recommending the same to the public in general."—Joseph Wirth.
(1818 G St., N. W., Washington, D. C.)

If it is the confidence of the people in Peru that sells Peruana, then the medicine that sells Peruana is the confidence of the people in Peru. No advertising can make a medicine sell if the confidence of the people in the medicine has been lost. The medicine has hope in the people. All over the land men and women are coming to Peruana for help. They are doing this in spite of the prejudices against patent medicines, the prejudice of the physician to the contrary.

When a medicine has once made a cure to a family, no persuasion is necessary to make it a permanent cure. Such an experience influences which such an experience influences. After a man or woman has tried Peruana, he or she will know the difference (and still the disease remains). The doctor will not be able to restore and realized immediately. After such a thing has happened, the doctor will realize the virtue of the remedy in the result.

Pe-ru-na Is Successful.
 Rev. G. W. Goode, 219 Ross Street, Danville, Va., writes:
 "Your treatment for catarrh has proved a success, and I find myself as it ought to be so, too. The reputation of Peru-na is built upon a solid foundation of public confidence. People have tried it, been relieved by it and believe in it. This and alone explains the universal nois-

I am sure that you will appreciate the ground of returning as early an answer to this letter as may be possible after consideration by yourself and your friends of the serious proposal which it contains.

HARVARD CREW SHOWS UP WELL IN PRACTICE FOR RACE IN ENGLAND

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Aug. 25.—English rowing circles for a week past have been declaring that Cambridge had the Americans crushed because Harvard in practice on the Thames at Putney did not let themselves out, rowing conservatively. Now that Harvard has moved to Putney and has rowed the night course from Putney to Mortlake showing extraordinary speed in the night water, the critics are not so sanguine of a Cambridge victory. They fear the Harvard oarsmen have a lot of their sleeves not yet divulged.

Within three days Harvard will row thoroughly the tidal currents of the night course and be able to show the Thames watermen that the American style and brawn are at least equal to Cambridge's.

The critics are trying to overcome the fact that the victory of the Harvard crew is greater than Cambridge's and declare that the Americans' weight

A kind letter has arrived from the Prince of Wales, and the Princess and the mrs. visit to see them at practice.

Morgan arrived at Putney yesterday. He said he was surprised to discover the enormous interest of the public in the race. "So far as I am able to judge," he said, "the interest is enormous."

Both generally declared they did not think the crew lost anything by their absence. "Owen Vandy said: 'The Harvard crew are thoroughly acclimated now and I am convinced that the crew's practice work is highly satisfactory. The change of climate and water has not affected the boys, and the way they rowed yesterday from Putney to Mortlake gave me great satisfaction. I consider that the crew is under a misapprehension, because there is no loss whatever, however it may appear to spectators. Cambridge is a good crew and very dangerous opponents. I have faith that Harvard will win.'" from a brief inspection I think the course is fair, but I will know more about next week when I have rowed the course."

Glass and Richardson said they would be well enough to enter the boat next week and hoped to make up lost time. Both generally declared they did not think the crew lost anything by their absence.

Glass and Richardson have recovered from their disabilities and are ready to take an active part in the race. They are and is eager to begin practice.

Capt. Filly said today the crew were used to rowing in rough water, so were untroubled by the roughness of the Thames.

"Yesterday when we rowed the full course we found the water rougher than we expected, having been told that the water yesterday would not be rough as usual," Filly said. "Harvard was able to make a good showing no matter what the conditions on the water. We are having a delightful time here. I have faith that Harvard will win."

English hospitality is appreciated highly.

Harvard oarsmen now lay England are getting in fine trim for their race with Cambridge crew on September 8. The past week the Vankes made marked improvement and Britishers are surprised at their present form.

Morgan's return to his seat will work to the advantage of the Crummen crew. Glass and Richardson are expected to be back in the shell to-morrow.

BOXING NELSON SAYS GUNS SHOULD BE FAVORITE GOLF

BRITT SAYS NELSON WILL FALL BEFORE GANS'S BODY BLOWS

JAMES EDWARD BRITT, the three times champion, former champion and man who has fought both Joe Gans and Battling Nelson in the title, and who has been called the "Black Diamond" by HACKMAN MYRTLE, tells why he picks the colored pugilist to win from ALAN.

BY JAMES EDWARD BRITT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—While it is true there will be another battle for the lightweight championship of the world, this time it will be between Battling Nelson of Chicago and Joe Gans of Baltimore. It will be a fight for life and death in pugilism, and will result in the downfall of the Dane. On the September 5 of last year Nelson met me in a fight here at Colma, and after eighteen rounds of hard fighting in which I gave and received considerable punishment, he was the victor. It was just six days short of a year when Nelson met the "Black Diamond," and just six days short of a year that he will experience what fell to me last.

It is a fight for life and death, and it will make it a matter to study every fighter. He has found Nelson a really, and this, coupled with my experience will carry him through the storm on Saturday night.

He will prosper by my mistake.

It is the Dane's aim to use his side into his man and swing away with right and left hand, and to open into the body and the gut with his head.

When I fought him the second time I foolishly mist with him, and the result was that I met defeat.

Gans a Good Rouser.

In Gans he will meet a man who will meet him too to two in the slugging game, a man who can fight like a tiger, and (if fortune) is roughing it, and he will find out who will pound him though a railed firing gun were aimed directly at it.

In all the negro's battles he proved conclusively that he can administer as much slugging as he can receive, and he is a very delicate creature.

The world knows that but in far from clever, of course, Nelson will do all in his power to avoid the negro's blows, but they will come too fast and thick for him, and let us say right here that Nelson will never stand the fight satisfactorily.

Another advantage that Gans will have that was denied me is that Nelson will not be permitted to run his head into Gans's chin like he did

Joe is a great head fighter and studying his man all throughout the battle. He is one of the best fighters in the business, and he will time every move he makes.

As a boxer Joe stands second to none in the business, and many of the blows that landed on me when I fought Bob will hit the colored boy's head.

Steve can be suffering great pain in a fight, yet he will never allow his opponent to know it. He is in the habit of saying to himself, "I will win this fight, he can't take it," and a blow as his opponent can't believe will have to come hard and often to stop him.

Joe is a very good fighter, and a very good com-mate, and his clever foot work will be a puzzle to the best fighter. I do not want to make Nubso Newport cheap because he has beaten me but I must say that he is doing work. It is his own fault that he has lost the fight. He is a very good fighter, and a very good com-mate, which he does not occupy, and history shows that a fighter of that type goes

Says Gans Is Better Man.

I fought Gans in October of 1904 and lost to him on a point. The battle is over and let me tell you that had I not lost when I did I would have fallen before his mighty punch.

He can hit like a cannon ball, and every one of his blows count. This is more than I can say for Nelson.

He hit me a number of times, but most of his blows lacked effect. Joe will permit Nelson to come at him with his head down, and just about the time Nelson is ready to land Joe will sidestep and get the Dane in the wind. Nelson will fall back with a knock out considerably.

While Joe can land on almost any part of the body with his aim to the body is accurate, and I look for one of these blows to finish Nelson since I will finish the Dane in much less time than Nelson disposed of me, I am sure.

Of the two I must say that Gene has it on Nelson in every particular and the only thing that can defeat Joe is that he will not be strong at 132

Where it is a limited fight I would not hesitate in the least, but 142 pounds for Joe in a finish fight makes a big difference. However, I am still strong in my belief that Hans will knock out Nelson, and my money will go that way when the two meet at Goldfield, Nev., on September 3 of this year.

Money Melody May Have Hard Time With Thomas fighting for the lightweight championship in Coldfield, Honey Melody and Joe Thomas will be the main event, eight o'clock this afternoon. A "C" over in Denver, and the first of the week's events. The first battle will be announced to the fans at the Pythian rink, and they will have their fill of bad games for once.

According to official statements, the national automobile show held in Madison Square Garden last January, the artist's community of which caused endless comment, will be suggested by the 1907 exhibition. The Association of Licensed Automobile Engineers, as before, has announced that the first more than 100,000 square feet of the exhibition will be on the first floor, and much more magnificent effects will be seen. The same policy of having a large sign in charge of the exhibition is being followed.

BELL-IN-HAND. BOURBON

The Kentucky whiskeys produced half a century ago were of the straight, old fashioned Bourbon type. No Hyes were heard of fifty years ago. This whiskey is a genuine old fashioned Kentucky Bourbon of this type—distilled now as it was then.
